

Axiohm's A632 "pocket" printer pleases taxi drivers and their customers

Designed to meet the special needs of use inside a vehicle, and particularly those of taxis, the A632 is the latest version of the compact printers offered by Axiohm, the French company that is a leader in thermal printing.

More and more countries are adopting rules to regulate the profession of taxi driver. For this reason, a European directive project foresees that in the future taxi meters will be equipped with a printer that will create a receipt for customers containing all of the information related to their trip: the identification number of the vehicle, the reference number of the taxi ride, the date and time of pick-up, the mileage travelled and the total cost of the trip. This would save time both for drivers and for passengers who await notice of the trip's cost.

The A632 is « e » certified (95/94/EC), and thus won't interfere with electronics in the vehicle. It combines printing quality with minimal weight and size. With a weight of 330g and a significantly reduced size, the A632 is practically a « pocket » printer. With a power supply that connects directly to the vehicle's battery, the printer is very reliable and robust, with a shell capable of resisting extreme temperatures. It has already made life easier for many taxi drivers around the world, like in Brussels where strict regulations have been in place for several years.

Benefiting from Axiohm's know-how and advanced technologies, the printer appeals in every way:

Compact, quick, light, and robust: it is specially adapted for in-vehicle use, thanks to its weight (330g) and its small size (108x147x72 mm), and it takes advantage of the Clamshell™ design (patented by Axiohm) for simplified and almost instantaneous loading of a new paper roll. In addition, it offers a paper path of 58 mm and a high printing speed (55mm/s). Furthermore, like all Axiohm products, it is fully compliant with the rigorous European environmental standards.

Recommended price: 186 euros (single unit) to 156 euros (unit price for a lot of 10 printers)

Axiohm dreams up tomorrow's thermal solutions

Axiohm is one of the pioneers of thermal printing solutions. A French company with a strong international presence, it realizes 71% of its revenue outside of France. A major player in this market since 1988, and fortified by a dynamic R&D team, Axiohm has positioned itself as an exceptionally innovative enterprise. Today, thermal printing is found throughout our daily lives, from transportation tickets to credit card receipts.
